A just green transition: Assessing local benefits for the Nordic rural areas

Wednesday, 23 November @16:30-17:30

The green transition discussions often centre around the benefits to the urban areas. What local benefits do rural communities experience from the green transition? How do the green transition measures affect their labour market? Do they create value for the local communities, and how does this affect on how communities perceive transitions as just or not just? Is there a Nordic recipe for gaining local benefits from green transition in rural areas? Is the transition just enough for the rural communities?

The workshop invites policy makers from the national, regional and local level, green transition experts, researchers to join the discussion. You will get to hear stories from different Nordic rural communities and share your experiences!
